

GUSHING NOTES FILED BY A WIFE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Jape Doe Love Letters to Dr.
J. Townsend Travers Are Full of Fire.

NO DAILY WARM BATH.

Mrs. Travers Says Her Husband Will Not Furnish Hot Water for Tubbing.

Dr. J. Townsend Travers, a widely known Harlem physician and surgeon at Sydenham Hospital, had written his wife a love letter even remotely approaching the ardent, even fiery tone of an address to him by some romantic Jane Doe, the doctor would not now be facing a separation suit in the Supreme Court. The sharp contrast in love misadventure was submitted to Justice Hendrick to-day when Mrs. Leona Travers asked the court for $250 a month alimony and $5,000 counsel fee pending the trial of her suit.

Supreme Court Justice Hendrick, to-day, adjourned until Tuesday, the argument on the application of Mrs. Travers for alimony and counsel fees.

When Mrs. Travers, whose home was in Union Square, intercepted the physician in October, 1911, intercepted the physician's letter, she compared it with one she got from her spouse in April, 1912, while she was visiting her mother. They were markedly dissimilar in spirit and letter, as they say in law, and besides they were distinctly unlike in purpose and import, the wife avers in a lengthy complaint which is filed with her motion papers for maintenance.

As she pondered over the two letters, her memory quickly turned to other illustrations of the doctor's unchivalrous nature, she asserts, among them being his obstinate refusal to provide heat in their home at No. 74 East One Hundred and Eleventh street, sufficient for her to have her daily bath. Anent this daily requisite Mrs. Travers avers she was not able to bathe in her home for nearly a year. The baths she enjoyed were indulged in, she remembered, at the homes of friends. Surely this was a deprivation which constituted the grossest cruelty, she contended, as her mind turned to other husbandly lapses.

ONLY A SIXTH INSTEAD OF A BETTER HALF.

When she and the physician were married after a brief courtship her parents, who are wealthy, gave Dr. Travers nearly $4,000 to set the young folks up in proper style. But instead of being the doctor's better half or at least an equal half, she learned shortly that she was only one-sixth in his household, and a most obscure and humble one-sixth at that, she avers.

In the three-story brown stone home, which the physician owns, Mrs. Travers asserts she found her husband's father and mother, brother and sister, and with herself and her husband the family was made up. On top of this discovery, Mrs. Travers charges, her husband compelled her to cook for her own maid, the doctor declaring that he needed the girl to tend to his office on the ground floor.

However, she was tolerably happy for three months, when she charges the physician cut down her spending money to $1 a week. When she complained he referred her to his mother. So conservative was her husband in money matters, she declares, that he would not provide her with shoes. Her parents, overcome with sympathy, bought her shoes when she avers her toes were actually pecked through ragged holes. And this in spite of the $14,000 a year she says her husband earns. The complaint, which was drawn by Sobel & Smith, at No. 20 Broadway, contains numerous other allegations of the doctor's alleged neglect.

Attached to the papers are copies of the two letters which set Mrs. Travers thinking. The first one, unaddressed, pened by a Miss Doe of noteworthy poetic tendencies, reads:

"Well, what do you think of this outburst? I am sure you are not angry, but tell me, do you think I am the least bit silly? I could think of things much better, but I am not entirely capable of rhyming, and, therefore, I give you some one else's very good work.

Here the writer inscribes a poem beginning:

"This passion is but an ember of a sun,
Of a fire long ago,
I could not love and remember, and so
I love and forget."

"Then there is another which appeals to me," continues the writer, "but my love must not get conceited, for I think love should uplift instead of lowering, and when you spurn love you surely lower yourself."

Another poem entitled "You Kissed Me" is interjected after this paragraph, after which the writer, whom Mrs. Travers is particularly desirous of meeting, continues:

"This is the last and mine, my sweet darling, I wonder do you know or can you realize how much there is in me? Or would you rather that I showered these on another? If you give me one-fourth in return I am quite sure I will be satisfied."

"Good night! ah, no, the hour is ill which awakens those it should unite. Let us remain together still—then it will be GOOD NIGHT."

How can I call the lone night good night, though thy sweet wishes wing its flight?

Be it not said, but understood—then it will be GOOD NIGHT.

To hearts which near each other move, from evening close to morning light, The night is good because, my love, they never say good night.

Because I love you, love you, my precious boy.

The writer neglected to sign her name, but the doctor inserted his signature in the letter he wrote, which reads:

April 13, 1912.

Leon—Hope you are having a pleasant stay-taking in all the good times. Don't forget the little matter I spoke to you about. It is coming due shortly and must have whatever best you can get, Joe.

Both letters in their original form were submitted to the court by Samuel Sobel, Mrs. Travers's lawyer. While the lawyer would not discuss the case, the papers provide Justice Hendrick with a fine opportunity of a study in belletrics.

Safety Pin Killed Him.

A small safety pin caused the death of two-year-old John Simpson in his home, No. 34 South Twelfth street, Newark, last night. The child swallowed the pin on Jan. 26 and died from internal hemorrhage in his home last night.

The pin was found open in his stomach. Several physicians, including specialists from New York City, tried to save the boy, but their efforts were unavailing.

Jury Out at Cleome Murder Trial.

Summing up by counsel for the State and the defense, followed by the charge of the Court to-day, marked the proceedings in the third day of the trial of Mrs. Madalena Cleome, charged with the murder of her husband, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, at Newark. The jury took the case this afternoon.

STRANGE WHITE STUFF GIVES CITY A PUZZLE; SOME CALL IT "SNOW"

Very Peculiar Phenomenon for These Parts Makes Weather
Sharps Scratch Heads.

An unusual phenomenon for these parts came to pass shortly before noon to-day. Gray clouds had been overhanging the sky all morning and suburbanites had been driven from work in their gardens and flower beds by the absence of sunshine. In exposed parts of the city windows were closed and a few people were seen riding inside the Fifth avenue buses. Some of the Belt line car drivers had put on their coats. While particles floating vaguely with the wind were the first signs of the phenomenon above mentioned. Soon these particles were joined by others and still others came, apparently from the clouds. In time the very air was filled with them.

Observers noted the particles were wet and melted when they struck the pavement or the clothing. They were also cold. Before long it was ascertained that these particles, when allowed to congregate, as it were, on the sidewalk, presented a slippery surface.

The city was rife with speculation. Small boys appeared with boxes and barrels into which they scooped the strange precipitation from the skies. As rapidly as possible the boys hurried to their homes with their loads. It having occurred to them that the stuff would make a good substitute for ice, of which there has been a notable scarcity since Christmas.

Within an hour after noon New York and the waters surrounding the city were wrapped in a white fog. Old inhabitants experienced in weather conditions informed inquirers that this fog was composed of minute particles of frozen moisture commonly called snow.

Yes, gentle reader, it snowed. But the snow won't last long, the weather man says. He predicts fair weather for tomorrow.

SURELY SETTLES UPSET STOMACHS

"Pape's Diapiesin" Ends
Indigestion, Gas, Sour-ness and Heartburn
in Five Minutes.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestions, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapiesin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment Diapiesin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.
